

Raimy Khalife-Hamdan is a second-year student at the Honors College at the University of Oregon. She studies Romance Languages and International Relations, with a focus on peace and conflict resolution in the Middle East. She recently traveled to Oxford University to attend the Oxford Consortium on Human Rights. In her studies, she focuses extensively on migration and human rights within today's global movements. She was eager to be an ambassador for La Convivencia because of her passion for religious coexistence, language, and cross-cultural communication. She is very grateful to work with such an in-depth and compassionate nonprofit.
